Award-winning chefs are cooking up fabulous six-course meals this weekend. Part of Taste Asia celebrations, chef Zizhao Luo is cooking dinner, and chef Hemant Manthur and his wife, pastry chef Surbhi Sahni, are cooking lunch at James Beard House.

Chef Hemant Mathur is a Michelin-starred Indian chef who earned the first Michelin star awarded to an Indian restaurant in the U.S. He later went on to open Tulsi, which also earned a Michelin star the year it opened. Now, he is at the helm of no less than six Indian restaurants in New York City — needless to say, he knows his way around Indian cuisine.

Mathur will be serving up delicious dishes from Bengali and Keralan traditions at his luncheon. Savor the Sago Potato Cakes and Black Seabass Pollichathu (and that's just for starters!). Dessert will be made by pastry chef Surbhi Sahni, who will be whipping up some delectable kulfi, which is traditional Indian ice cream.
